

Historical Antecedents of Chinese Business Ethics

This paper explores the historical development of the Chinese view of business ethics. The paper investigates 5,000 years of Chinese history and includes the significant contributions of Confucius, Mencius, Laozi and Zhuangzi, as well as more modern figures in China's history. It is proposed that these important historical individuals and philosophies greatly influenced the development of current Chinese ethical practices. This paper provides insight into why Chinese business ethics are so different from those found in the West.
